Incident on ride in China

NAFLIC has received a report that a teenage girl who was flung from an amusement park ride in China has died. The girl was thrown from a “fast turning” ride onto metal railings and was taken to hospital, where she later died.

An initial investigation showed that the rider’s seatbelt had broken and a passenger safety bar did not fit tightly enough at the Chaohua Park near the city of Chongqing. According to the report the ride had been inspected in December.

The committee believes this is the second incident involving one of these rides.
